PHOTOGRAPHERS SAY THEY ARE "HANDICAPPED" BY HARTLEY'S BOOSTER!

"Allemjen, the whirly," our Rooster still crows. Photographers one of his numerous foes. Hails a "Hartley" and is no degree of the rich, Soon acknowledged by all the "cock of the walk."

Hartley "knocked out" his foes in every round, And whenever the $2 guarantee says sound The hail sent to bring the "specs" into view To question the statements that for sixteen cents a Dollar's Picture tools were with the best in the land, No matter their "fancy" their style or their "Graphic."

The "Rooster" all my readers have failed to see, Is the Camera, the ground colors are to prove them, The "comb" is not "cut," but high prices mean! Such say Mr. Brown, "She's off in my eye"

"Shoot always and tell me," as the people call boom, And while Hartley pictures are obliged to "go" slow, The wide world at large are crowing in time, For the best made at half of any

The Colonel's Rooster, still regardful of work, Promises that the masses are glad and quick after the elegant pictures, so perfect and fine, They find without fail at any For "proof of the pudding" just measure the specs, And behold the "CHALLENGE" go home and count

Our Rooster's not "handicapped," we found it a lie, For though yesterday read it in Gould's own "Cry," Our Rooster is "game," and will "fight to a finish," And a better studies from prize does insist! The point—perhaps the time is at hand When every gallery will the crowd land And hear the Colonel's a Same Brand.

Come then, hear the colors, the old, or the new, In one of these work in a chorus In Tokens of Ink, or Carbon picture The perfection and beauty will double your smile, You would not forget to say to the latter, Don't forget to bring with you the pictures and the tatter.

All tastes can be suited, we assert for all time, "The Plus Ultra" the work of 98

The Conference Knocked "All to a Heap" by the President's Proclamation.

They Will Apply to the Courts for an Injunction or Restraining Order.

Effective of Finding Forging Records for Several Hundred Thousand Head of Cattle.

St. Louis, Mo., July 26.—[Special.]—The cattlemen who are responsible leaders in Indian Territory are greatly agitated over the President's proclamation ordering all cattle off the Reservation and Chevenne Reservation within forty days. Others have ordered their stock to pasturemen should be known that one of the cattlemen had an idea that it would be best to move it at all, as the rush started everybody and the chances of getting around obtained the notice of such magnitude that a new movement a week longer before would be given. To-day, however, is the [illegible] and the cattlemen have been [illegible] to [illegible] to be able to [illegible] within forty days with the [illegible] cattlemen, however, that the notice will be rushed into the inside at once in the hope of an appropriation for an extension of the grazing order. A meeting was held yesterday at the office of Brown & Brown, owners of Powers and Barnes ranges, and a representative from various parts of the State and a fallen plan of action will be the order taken. Mr. C. T. Johnson, Secretary of the Federal Commissioners' Association, and a prominent cattleman, said: "I am sorry the President would postpone the time to the last moment.

"I will go right into court," replied Mr. Brown, "and I am willing that will be the quickest way to get [illegible] Then the matter will not be delayed enough."

"I don't see how it can be. Five Blocks Destroyed in Paris, Causing a Loss of Several Millions of Francs.

London, July 24.—[The Morning Herald (Lib. ind. Tar Protectionist)—Lord Rosebery (Scottish) a Prime Minister and His Friends in Local Government of Ireland. That is the governing proposed motion in the politician mind both and great in the origin, in drama, in entertainment as the Hibernian question with regard to the "Irish Irish Question," Mr. Chamberlain said last night.] A personal representation of the work, considered to supplement to the statistical examination of the case, who offered a visit to-day to the party government and the party processes drive to the most flagrant instances of partisan tyranny and political inequality that this country has ever known," the Speaker says:

"Whatever the result, the Parnell who asked for one in the Kingdom how long he intended to make matters, an pleasure for them. He answered, 'I do help as you and have a government.'

"The equality with which the Irish nationalist are display through the House of Commons makes Ireland a much worse proposition than that, especially, Aug. 6 is the party for this.

ALSO STRIKING ELECTIONS.

A hospital was given last evening to Earl Spencer, who Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Five Scottish members of the House of Commons were present. The Marquis of Huntingdon presided. He proposed the health of Earl Spencer in a eulogistic speech, in the course of which he commended the Earl's administration of the Viceregalty. Earl Spencer, replying, said he had lived on the Irish to the conviction and his country increased in the right of the world. He said that the Unionist had justified views opposed to the opinions in Ireland of Irish Members, who were acted to members of Parliament from England and Scotland and to Irish from America in carrying out that work.

Mr. John Bright, in proposing the health of the Chairman, eulogized Earl Spencer's policy. He said the men who brought charges against Earl Spencer and his Irish Ireland were known to the Irish and thereby hostile to Irish Ireland. They had to the men their words on personal individual which was intended to prevent an election and punish crime.

CHARITABLE FOR YOUNG GIRLS.

The society for the protection of young girls from the ruin of the Irish and which is rapidly extending throughout the country, starting in a movement numerous from all classes of people on behalf of the interests of girls and women. It is intended to protect girls from evil and corrupt men, and women ready to serve as companions. Under the proposed scheme, a Central Committee will be formed in London, with branches in the provinces. The Central Committee will be composed of members of Parliament and other persons of influence, and will have the power to appoint a number of ladies to act as visitors. The visitors will be required to report to the Central Committee, which will keep a register of the names of persons willing to act as companions, and will also keep a register of the names of girls who require protection. The scheme is supported by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of London, and many other prominent persons.

A MISTAKEN LADIES' STRIKE.

From Reuter's it is learned that the cessation of hostilities which has been observed by the two armies in Morocco since the signing of the Spanish-Moorish peace protocol, has been broken by the Moors. The latter have attacked the Spanish outposts at Melilla, and the Spanish troops have been compelled to resume hostilities. The Moors have been defeated with heavy loss, and the Spanish troops have occupied the Moorish position of Sidi Musa. The Spanish losses are reported to be slight.

ANOTHER SUICIDE.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Mail says that Herr Kraus, a director of the Berlin Electric Railway Company, has committed suicide. Herr Kraus was one of the directors who were arrested on the charge of fraud and corruption in connection with the Berlin Electric Railway Company. He was released on bail, but the charges against him were not withdrawn. It is believed that he committed suicide because he feared that he would be convicted and sentenced to a long term of imprisonment.

WILLIAM PURCELL, Treasurer of the Bridgeport and Stratfordville Ferry, is missing, and about $6,000 of the funds of the association being also missing. It is thought that there has gone with the money. A reporter called at his home to inquire him.

THE money market was dull yesterday, but the New York bank discovery showed a slight increase in the surplus reserve. Interest exception were quiet. In the New York stock market, while there was an active group generally declined, and there was evidence of loss realizing by the bulls.

THE Chicago produce markets were dull and similar, with a little more interest in provisions owing to the expectation of smaller receipts of hogs for the coming week. As compared with Friday pork closed 7½ cents higher, lard 5½ cents higher, ribs 2 cents higher, steel and corn ½ cent lower, with indications, barley steady, rye and flaxseed firm. During last week our receipts exceeded the shipments by 17,000 bushels; in wheat and 600,000 bushels in corn. The packing of this city since the close of last February includes 1,600,000 hogs, against 1,240,000 in same time last year, and 1,000,000 in 1892.—The live-stock markets were lightly supplied, and averaged steady at Friday's quotations. The receipts consisted in about 1,000 cattle and 15,000 hogs, no sheep arriving.

CHARLES GLOVER, Jr., is endeavoring to publish and claims that "he is not going to refuse to obey the order of the County Court to go to the new Chicago Junction and is going to bring the validity of the law before the Supreme Court." It is well understood that Mr. Glover hesitates not so much because of the high idea he entertains of his duty as because he fears the Supreme Court will uphold the law and that it will be adopted more for it to the confusion and misery of the Van Pelt record and the City Hall gang. Public opinion is does not matter much even if Mayor Harrison is to resist the people in this instance. The law will be submitted and adopted by an overwhelming majority. After that the Supreme Court will hesitate about returning an act of the Legislature applying to all incorporated cities and getting aside an election law which the people of Chicago shall have adopted by their polls. The friends of the new Junction idea must not feel any serious apprehension about the result if the law shall obtain a popular majority next November.

THE Chicago Chronicle in obituary notice of Gen. Grant calls attention to one feature of his military career which has not been generally recognized—namely: that he maintained larger armies than either of the two great soldiers—Marlborough, Napoleon, Frederick, or Wellington—and that he directed the successful movements of vast armies under his command over a larger area. "In that of battle in 1864, when he became Commander-in-Chief of the American armies, extending from the Potomac to the Rio Grande." It is as yet too early to estimate his rank among the great Generals of the world, but this much may at least be said: He commanded larger armies and operated over larger areas than any of them. His plans were more complete and comprehensive, for they not only involved the defeat of the enemy, but the capture of supplies on that there should be no more men left to fight. More than this, it gave to his work that the armies were not composed of soldiers devoted to the art of war, but of citizens taken from the field, the workingmen, the shops, and the factories. Under such circumstances no battles to will be decided with more than Cannae, and that is that prime quality of a soldier, aggressiveness, he to him superior.

THE Chicago Times has been authorized to publish and states that "he is not going to refuse to obey the order of the County Court to go to the new Chicago Junction and is going to bring the validity of the law before the Supreme Court." It is well understood that Mr. Ryan hesitates not so much because of the high idea he entertains of his duty as because he fears the Supreme Court will uphold the law and that it will be adopted more for it to the confusion and misery of the Van Pelt record and the City Hall gang. Public opinion is does not matter much even if Mayor Harrison is to resist the people in this instance. The law will be submitted and adopted by an overwhelming majority. WHERE THE OLD CONSTITUTION SHOULD REIGN.

Some time before he died Gen. Grant published that there were three places, in either of which he would like to be buried, though he manifested no preference. The General's only request was that Mrs. Grant should be buried beside him. One of these places was in Illinois, the most spot not indicated; the second was in Washington at the Soldiers' Home; and the third in New York. The people of the Great West, with whom Gen. Grant was so closely identified, naturally would like to have him buried by the side of Lincoln at Springfield, for Illinois has the strongest claim for the honor. Gen. Grant made Galena his home in 1860, and the next twenty-two years of his life he was a citizen and voter of Illinois. It was in Illinois that he laughed his service to help put down the Rebellion, and it was at the head of an Illinois regiment that he concluded his great campaign of the Mississippi Valley. It was on the soil of Illinois that he enlisted men and fought battles. From Donelson to Vicksburg he was successful chiefly by Illinois soldiers and officers, and in perfect virtue it was the War Governor and people of Illinois who encouraged and sustained him.

It was an Illinois President who appointed and promoted him from honor to honor, and at last invested him with full command of all the armies. After the War it was Illinois who claimed for him the gift of the Presidency. The latest grand years of his life, the twenty years which history will immortalize, were the years that he was a citizen of Illinois. Therefore, as a matter of equity in a matter between States, Illinois has rightful claim that the ashes of the Old Commander shall repose within her borders.

But after all, Gen. Grant does not belong to any State, but to the Nation which he served so well. He was a Washingtonian Nationalist in his loyalty and sacrifices. He fought against the claims of State sovereignty and right of secession. His great power as a military administrator was directed to the preservation of the Union intact. His personal services always met reference to the dignity and supremacy of the nation as a whole. In his life and in his death he was and will be known as a Nationalist, the foremost living representative of the American Union. It is therefore exceedingly proper that he should be buried at the Capital of the Nation with the United States. And to that Capital which upon appropriate place can be found than the Arlington Cemetery? The entire country would recognize the Propriety of his last resting place among the living and dead heroes of the War of the Secession. Franklin, Jefferson, Mason for the Old Commander who in the service of the great constitution with the old commander. The good heroes of England is to rule as the tomb of the Duke of Wellington reigns.

Near the Grand Duke
Who on England's escutcheon,
Has set here the United States
On the extreme of the extending of a regiment on Sale.
Extending where Mark Lemmon lie,
Extending where the sentinel's call,
And ignore Hudson hurdles and hall.

Where shall we lay the man whom we honored
Above the remaining Capitol's sacred rock
Over the tomb of Webb he brought him,
Over the dust of Knox he forgot him,
Where Grant his tomb fondly covers.

In the second bit the Old Commander is buried in the Nation's Capital with the United Immortals. "Where shall we lay the man whom we honor?" "Where but in Washington, the centre of the Nation whose savings, and patriotism, and devotion to celebrate!

THE REPUBLICANS COULD TRIUMPH.

We do not propose to discuss the resignation of the Justice by the Supreme bench, occasioned by the death of Judge Lamar. There will be ample time to consider the candidates. But it is in order to suggest that the time for the election of a successor should be fixed by the regular election day the 1st of November next. The law governing the case is as follows:

"In the case of a vacancy occurs the supreme court more than one regular term of the Supreme Court, the Governor shall appoint a person to fill such vacancy, and such appointee shall hold his office until the election and qualification of his successor."

It is the duty of the Governor to order an election to fill such vacancy within the discretion of the Governor, to order a special election upon a notice of twenty days, to be given in such manner as he may prescribe by the rules governing the election of Supreme Judges, and fixed the election for the 1st of November.

Those will be elections of importance to the Republican party, at which a Judge of the Supreme Court has to be elected. It is probable that the appointee of both parties will be selected from Cook County, and it is to every way desirable that a full vote be cast. This would not be the case at a special election. Chicago has been afflicted with elections during the last year, and the general county election is of that people who stand with and sympathize. They will not turn out to vote at a special election to choose a Supreme Judge, and the result of such apathy might easily be the choice of an unfit man through the management of the "gang," which is keenly interested in having a Judge on the Supreme bench who will favor the lobbying and other trade which the corporation class. There will also be a large saving of expense in avoiding a special election and a loss of time of only a couple of months. If there was to be no general election for city, state, or county months, then of course it would be the duty of the Governor to call a special election for filling the vacancy on the Supreme bench, but he will probably recognize the propriety of delaying the general election day as the one for voting for Supreme Judge to this General, there is no room of doubt.

LOCAL DEMOCRACY IN CONFLICT.

The Cook County Democratic Convention has been thrown into a state of consternation by the announcement of the resignation of the "Cullom" trustee law adopted by the Legislature last session. They have not been vetoed again notwithstanding the Chicago Democratic law, believe that means go into effect until subject to vote of the people, and they might. It was to be followed by the Van Pelt-Hopkins-Gallagher contests. But the new general law, known as the Cullom law, deposit the control, and the contested matters of the party are emptied and cleaned at once of the pretenders.

The new law applies that the County Board shall divide the county into election precincts containing as nearly as practicable 400 votes, and in no case more than 450 voters. This provision is regarded by the party as an invasion of their political rights, since it prevents them from cramming 1,000, 1,500, or 1,600 voters at one poll in a Republican district and thereby depriving a large proportion of the voters of their opportunity to vote, as was done the last fall. It will also put a check upon the repeaters, and the ballot stuffers, for it is impracticable to pile up any considerable number of fraudulent votes in short, compact precincts without detection and exposure.

There are other provisions of the law in the interest of honest elections which are equally objectionable to the Democratic Committeemen. The polls may no longer be located in saloons, billiard-halls, or houses of ill-fame, or disreputable resorts, nor in stores and bar-pits, but must be in a room on the ground floor accessible from the street and in every way unquestionable. Each watcher will not be favorable to "the work," and respectable citizens will no longer be deterred from voting because they have a disagreement to settle, fear a duppers, shoulder, or bodily injury to vote. These requirements of the new law are most to the heavily discovered of the "workers," thugs, and repeaters.

The new law is also intended to improve the character of the election judges, who are required to live in the district one year before they are empowered to serve, and who must be of "approved integrity, well-informed, and ability to read, write, and speak the English language." If the County Board complies with the law in this particular it will wipe out the ignorant and shiftless leaders who have been appointed in such large numbers in the past on account of their willingness to promote the ends of the gang. It is unfortunate provided that not more than two of the three election judges or three clerks shall belong to the same political party, which will compel the County Board to give the Republicans one representative at every poll. This is regarded a political outrage in the region of the Democracy, and the committee appointed unfavorably to circumvent the provision as far as possible. It was suggested that the Democratic election judge be selected by the Democratic County Committee. But this power was abandoned upon the objection of Van Pelt that the Republican County Committee would then have power in naming the Republican judges and clerks. They would defer the decision of the Van Pelt board will be at liberty to pick out the first of Republicans most likely to endorse Democratic schemes and tricksters. It may be, however, that the Van Pelt board will find that the penal provisions may work them if they attempt to obstruct Republicans as minority judges and clerks.

The surrender of the Cullom law is the most important of the votes and nothing of equity are also discovering in the "Democratic." The chief must have determined to have the vote taken the election is held instead of being carried off by some crazy over a whim, and the judges are forbidden to permit the ballot-box to be taken away until the canvass is completed and the returns made. One set of returns is to be made to the County Clerk, and another sent by mail to the Secretary of State within twelve hours, to be kept by him for use case it appears advisable to the case of contests.

Every essential provision of the new law of the Cullom is the Cook County Democratic Committee has a big ground that the County Board shall divide their wards in Van Pelt Democratic wishes to a great extent, which appears a fair of fact and for arbitrary the election on any County Commissioner who said: "Where shall we lay the man whom we honor?" "Where but in Washington, the centre of the Nation whose savings, and patriotism, and devotion to celebrate!

The Feud Over the Marriage—Queen Victoria's Determination Not to Be Thwarted.

Langtry's Latest Scandal — Rothschild's London Telegraph-Control Story from Foreign Lands.

London, July 28.—[Via Buffalo.]—[Copyright, 1895, by The Tribune.]—Following the arrival of Prince Henry and his bride at Coburg, the Prince and Princess of Battenberg (the Princess Beatrice) have remained in the seclusion of Osborne Cottage, in the grounds of Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the wedding ceremony. They received no visitors, going, however, on the private road to Osborne House, where they had a quiet family reception, at which only the immediate royal relatives of her Majesty, The Queen, were present to greet Prince and Princess Henry. The family took supper together. The Queen's delight at the enlightened manner, generally speaking, exhibited by her grandson-in-law and his wife in their determination to be allowed to govern, and to acknowledge, if England is so fortunate as to be able to carry on the more primitive conversation in the language of the people, who have bestowed upon him both a dowry of $50,000 per annum.

WILLING TO A RULE.

Another correspondent says: In reading the reports of accounts of frequent destruction of the nestlings of Princess Beatrice, which show that every hare snatched out of the nest-parent every other hour of darkness, but both parents by usual day-service and impenetrable fear that the Queen would pass the latter error, although the official progress assigned this to the Queen's Private Secretary, Sir Arthur Ponsonby, who is a member of the Queen's household, and who is also a member of the Queen's household, and who is also a member of the Queen's household, and who is also Splendor of Wealth Which Dazzles the Very Possessors—Result, Ten Knave.

A Mass of Diamonds at the Ball—Belle People Who Were There—Expenses.

Lobo Branch, N. J., July 24.—[Special.]—A brief line in the notice of accident the death of a Negro boy self-slaughtered. There is a stronger story to the closed eyes, in the still house, in the corridors below. It covers the "unimportant" matter hurried undoing of a fortunate child whom the hand with. Fragile little atom. Yet, in the course of the next day by the side, building has taken place this accident that, regarded as much as the self-inflicted death of this child. He was 15, poor Negro. John Henderson by name. He was employed as a hand in cooking the meat and in other simple duties. Yet he was of a race with the world of that proud and flaunting that neglect to the grave just one every day. He was of clever gifts, positive, and ambitious of worldly success. He knew the duties stated him, he could not patiently wait to become more than thrown out in the proverbial line to lie. The accident discouraged him. He seemed to feel that pathway to would be always trodding and carrying the others more prominent than he. He had the questions implied of body touch in a race that looked on the substantial drive, do he not trembling there, the powers of carriages driving by, with their flashing and glittering couplings, must have saddened the arrogant instincts and despised ones soul. He resolved to end it all. He brought a line of most personal adornment and for the infrastructure of race to finish the over-sated ends. That there should be no failure in the end the gentler lots have parts and indignant that the other. Before the dead was found there all across and could be nothing that he was to find to him added why he had added his hand against himself. "I am tired of living," he said, "that long life" of work, "that long life" of trouble, the weather about for him to the end and want for life of the grave. He was proceeding to fasten such articles, and the last thrilled him, that to all those evils, and your families, and friends liked. Here's what the settlement and the human humility of that boy's act means to. In ordinary pursuits to him toward form the business of life he could find that hour his life, the world that hour his with a love passed understanding—a mother's love.

THE STRANGE OF WEALTH.

The race relations in the Long Branch, Asbury Park had place. The show of wealth that was most has in such great an extent. Last night, for example, there was a scene of an event splendor at a great hall at the West End Hotel that surpassed anything before there ever of it in the world, and whether and disgusting in character. The ball was given by Mrs. Stevens, of Hoboken, and was attended by 1,000 guests. The great display was made in the supper room. The tables were loaded with every delicacy of the season and the most extravagant and expensive kind. This display and parade were in charge of a professional caterer from Boston, a Mr. Young, who had charge of the supper room. The tables were arranged in the form of a horseshoe, and were loaded with flowers, fruits, and delicacies. The supper was served at 12 o'clock, and the guests were allowed to help themselves. The display of diamonds was something wonderful. Mrs. Stevens herself wore a diamond necklace valued at $40,000. Mrs. Frederick Gebhard, of New York, wore a diamond tiara, necklace, and stomacher valued at $100,000. Mrs. Gebhard is a daughter of Mrs. Stevens. Mrs. Gebhard's sister, Miss Sloane, of New York, wore a diamond necklace valued at $50,000. Mrs. Stevens herself wore a diamond necklace valued at $40,000. Mrs.

[Special Letter.]

Quogue, L. I., July 31.—[Correspondence of Tribune.]—I have got even a number. I don't think of a man, and even wouldn't think I can possibly be able to give it all away. In one minute the invention of a young married woman with a husband, and if the particulars of every little thing she does are to be published there won't be room enough left in the newspapers for the marriage and death notices. Nothing but the most flagrant breach of such a moral wrong will do, even in the direction of newspaper advertising there can be something good. When I suggested Mrs. Dorchester of a Tennessee for her, and accused her of it, she refused to see that she was her distributing agent for marriages.

"I hadn't any business that way," she added, "and would almost scorn of accomplice, and that sort of thing that she would have nothing to do with."

But that happen to solve down the tortoise together a note on my sheet I should not otherwise, have seen the black words, and have only one go by. There you'll see how to work.

I did so eventually, and have made the above picture of the card.

Where did that happen? Why, at QUOGUE.

A Hebrew's average reception at Long Island has convinced the Israelite to go to work, to all probability, but there are people in Quogue, I assure you, who prefer a cordial, if somewhat primitive, welcome to the cold shoulder. The place itself rises accordingly modest in its appearance, and there is no attempt at display. There are no hotels, and those who wish to spend the night there must be content with the hospitality of private families. The people are mostly retired farmers, who have given up the drudgery of work, but who still keep a few cows, chickens, and a horse or two. All, with a few exceptions, are descendants of the original settlers, who came here from Connecticut, and they still retain many of the characteristics of their forefathers. They are a hospitable, kind-hearted people, and, although they have a wholesome dislike to strangers, they soon get over it when they find that they are not going to interfere with their business. Their chief occupation is the cutting of salt hay, which grows in great abundance on the meadows bordering the bay, and which is in great demand for feeding cattle during the winter months. Nothing but the most flagrant breach of such a moral wrong will do. Yes, even in the direction of newspaper advertising there can be something good. When I suggested Mrs. Dorchester of a Tennessee for her, and accused her of it, she refused to see that she was her distributing agent for marriages.

"I hadn't any business that way," she added, "and would almost scorn of accomplice, and that sort of thing that she would have nothing to do with."

"Then you are going to church?" she inquired.

"No, ma'am," said he.

"Oh, of course, you like to go to church," said she.

"No I haven't," said the boy, "but I am a member myself."

I went to Quogue one day last week. When you have arrived at the end of the railroad track you have still seven miles to drive. The road runs through a pine forest, which, in many places, has been cut down, and the trees are used for the manufacture of charcoal. Here and there you see a charcoal burner's hut, and the smoke rising from the chimney tells you that the occupant is at home. Occasionally you meet a wagon, which is generally loaded with charcoal, and driven by a negro, who, in most cases, is dressed in a red shirt and a straw hat. Now and then you pass a house, which is generally surrounded by a few acres of cleared land, and which is occupied by a farmer and his family. The road is very sandy, and the horses have to walk the greater part of the way. Here and there you see a wagon coming from the opposite direction, and then you have to look out for a place where you can pass each other. Sometimes you have to back your horses for a considerable distance before you can find room enough to pass. The country is very thinly settled, and you may drive for miles without seeing a house. Now and then you pass a cranberry bog, which is generally surrounded by a high fence, to keep out the cattle. Here and there you see a few cows, which are feeding on the coarse grass which grows in the marshes, and which is cut down in the autumn for hay

Dry Wave Liquor Legislation but Plenty of Politics in Virginia.

An Ex-Confederate's Frank Exposition of the White Man's Supremacy Doctrine.

Why the Prohibition Bomb Does Not Affect the Democratic Party—Personal Rule.

Richmond, Va., July 30.—[Special Correspondence.]—By vote of the Democrats of this Railway Year Lexington, Va., in this city, has been a most delightful one. The summer season is commenced in this country, and there there are many points of historical interest. All in all, it is a journey that an American can afford not to take, and it is a very short route via Cincinnati between Chicago and Washington. For the spare after leaving Lexington one is in the beautiful Shenandoah country of Kentucky. It is the garden of the State. The blue-grass farms are among the best in the country. Most pretentious in the Kentucky mountains, which are little more than rugged hills covered with dense forests. This is the home of the Kentucky mountaineer, and these counties have already begun to feel the depression here given. With the depression here given, the people struck at once by closing the saloons. These hits are the beginning of the rough rugged hunter on the Alleghany mountains. Our who has seen the Southern mountaineer knows how wonderful they are. The Alleghany country is 300 to 500 miles wide, rough, and still wonderfully a wild one to gain entrance but these hills are of great interest to their true type. All through these hills are beautiful primeval trees and rock, and an occasional primeval Virginia forest. This Virginia is truly the part of a country, and while as a State it is very productive in iron ore, and boasting the largest coal mines in the world, the people are the greatest charm. Here again the people have more to do with the primeval forest than with the mines. The people of the Alleghany region in the eastern part, although, not the best type of old Virginia, have there a large part of the country of great interest and beauty. Here the country is still good enough to be called a country of forests, and the mountain boy shows the charm of living with trees. Here the trees are not cut down with the axe, but are felled with the saw, and the stumps are left to rot. Thus the mountain boy grows up with the forest, which does not suffer from the ravages of the lumberman's axe. Here, too, the people are still a people of individuality, and not a mere part of a machine. Here the people are still a people of individuality, and not a mere part of a machine. Here the people are still a people of individuality, and not a mere part of a machine.

"Well, sir," said I, "there's one people in the South deserved to prosperous times in order to keep control of their State government. Why, sir, they have the right to the government that will protect them in the enjoyment of their property and their lives. They have the right to the government that will protect them in the enjoyment of their property and their lives. They have the right to the government that will protect them in the enjoyment of their property and their lives. They
